For Immediate Release:
Santa Clara, CA:

IRF welcomes visit of President Bush visit to India, 36 years after visit of last Republican Party President Richard Nixon. USA and India are two great nations but in last 59 years only 4 US presidents visited India largely due to Cold War exigencies. Last 8 years have changed history and this is a good opportunity to finally cast a strategic relationship between these two big and important countries. IRF looks forward to consummation of 18-July-2005 resolve between Prime Minister Singh and President Bush to transform the relationship between India and US and establish a global partnership. A partnership between equals and grounded on reciprocity. Forging a strategic relationship is crucial for both countries in a changing geopolitical landscape; this tectonic shift will bring a new world order. The change will bring prosperity and security to people of India, America and world at large. We believe this treaty will increase people to people interaction and understanding between citizens of these two great nations.

India Research Foundation (IRF) is a non-profit organization committed to research and communicate the antiquity, diversity and potentials of Indian civilization. IRF seeks to examine the challenges and achievements of Indian people to date and explore opportunities to Indian people in realizing their unfulfilled promise and potential.
